

A simple, approachable and powerful way you or your church can share Jesus with others.

Hope, sent home to home.

Get the Gospel to those who need it most through postal evangelism.

Many Christians and churches are held back from evangelising because:

 They don't know where to go, who to approach or what to say

 They lack confidence, or dread confrontation

 It doesn't fit in with their busy schedules and other commitments

Postal evangelism – sending handwritten Gospel messages to addresses in the least Christian neighbourhoods – can help:

 It's systematic, scalable and data-driven

 But it's also personal, and builds a social bond

 It's calm and non-confrontational to write and receive, and doesn't require social confidence

 It's an under-utilised space in a noisy world, as most people only get bills through their letterbox

 It's flexible, with huge choice in what to include, how many to write, and when to prepare them

The Deliverers is a network of ordinary Christians who work as postal evangelists and support other Christians and churches to do the same. We use local statistics to find where Christians are fewest, and send letters and cards proclaiming Christ there.

Join us as:	Either:	And write to people:
An individual member – a regular Christian just sharing the Gospel, or	Informally – get in touch for advice or to compare notes and share ideas, or	Locally – hand-deliver to the least Christian parts of your town or city, and/or
A parish partner – a local church community inviting the unchurched to connect with them	Formally – sign up free of charge as part of our network to get more detailed data and support	Nationally – send to the least Christian parts of your region or country through the postal system

However we can help, we'd love to hear from you! Get in touch to find out more.
